

Figure 20. Profiles suggesting continuity of Naches fault zone. Complexities in eastern foothills of the Cascade Range may be due to overriding of the Naches fault by the younger, southwest-directed Cleman Mt./Quartz Mt. thrust system (top). Cross Section 3 (bottom) suggests that some of the active faults under the Kittitas Valley may be steep, like the Naches fault.